

A person who does not have healthy boundaries often flips back and forth between NO BOUNDARIES and WALLS.

What is a boundary that you set in relationships with clients in order to be able to engage with them from a place of compassion? (What is not OK with you that, when honored, creates space for you to be OK with others?)